

PROPERTY OWNERS SEEK EXTENSION OF IRVINGTON STREET

At the City Council meeting last Monday night, all members, the city attorney and city engineer were present. Mayor H. H. Smith presided.

A communication was received from the Veterans' Welfare Board, asking Daly City to cancel certain taxes on property belonging to members of their organization in our city. The communication was referred to the city attorney for his advice.

A letter from the firm of Gadding & McBean Co., concerning a sewer pipe ordinance was referred to the plumbing inspector.

Mr. Anthony, representing some property owners near the county line, addressed the Council on extending Irvington street from Templeton avenue to Acton street, and asked the Council to arrange for a meeting on March 26, at the City Hall. The members of the Council, thinking this a good move in the right direction, instructed the city clerk to notify those who would be directly affected to meet on that date.

The matter of making the alley running from Templeton to Roosevelt avenue, between Frankfort and Alexander streets, a one way road will be brought up at the next meeting. All those interested are invited to be present.

A complaint was made concerning the cutting of fire alarm wires, and Mayor Smith stated that he would visit the Electric Company this week, along with the fire chief, and ask for a better method of pole repairs that will not interfere with the alarm service.

The next session of the City Council will be held on March 26.

DE MOLAY SERVICE AT GRACE CHURCH

We are looking for a great day this Sabbath at Grace Presbyterian church. The De Molay boys are holding their annual service with us, and special music is being prepared. We hope to make it a real happy day for the boys. The pastor's address to the Chapter will be from the theme, "A Young Man's Vision. Service at 11 a. m.

The evening service will be held at 8 o'clock and the subject for this service will be, "A Rented House; Who Lives in It?" Mrs. McNair and Mrs. Pilgrim are working toward organizing a choir for the services, and a cordial invitation is given to all to come and help us to sing.

Last Sunday was a splendid day in all the work. Sunday school was bubbling over with life, and the C. E., led by Mildred Roof, was more interesting than ever. Miss Irons sang a beautiful solo at this service. And then the evening service was excellent, and we are trusting that this Lord's day may be even better, if possible.

The business meeting of the official board of the church was held last Thursday evening. It was well attended, and it would appear that new life is being infused into the work. Another meeting of the board will be held this Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the church parlors.

Our Communion service will be held March 25, and we are glad to announce the coming of Dr. W. Clyde Smith, the new executive secretary of the Presbyterian church, who will be with us and preach for us. Dr. Willis, of Ocean Avenue, will also be with us in that meeting.

The business meeting of the C. E. Society of the church held Tuesday evening was well attended and all members are taking hold of the work in good shape. Miss Sybil Riddell, our C. E. president, presided and has asked for the election of officers at the next business meeting.

There's a joy in Christian service,
When your life is close to Him;
There's a happy, holy chorus,
When He cleanses us from sin.

Will you come and join our number,
And together let us walk,
For the hearts of two were burning,
As with Christ they talk.

Yours in service,
CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

CROCKER PUPILS HIKE UP MOUNT TAMALPAIS

It is a time honored custom in Jefferson district for our District Superintendent, Mr. Savage, to take the graduating classes of the three schools, Crocker, Colma and Woodrow Wilson, on a hike up Mt. Tamalpais as soon as the weather of spring time will permit.

There is quite a rivalry among the three schools to see which will be the first to take the trip. This year the Crocker Eighth was the first to go, and although it rained the day before, the morning dawned beautifully clear and a happier crowd would have been hard to find than the one gathered at the foot of Crocker avenue at 7:45 a. m., March 8th. Dressed in hiking clothes, laden with lunch boxes, they laughingly surrounded Mrs. Frary, their principal and teacher, and many were the offers to carry the angel food cake which is always Mrs. Frary's contribution to the expedition, although the wit of the class remarked that it might be more appropriate for her to make "devil's food" cake instead.

Mr. Savage was the last to join the party, and then they took the street car for the ferry.

There is no other large city in the world from which such a wonderful and diversified one day trip may be taken, and that, too, at a total cost of less than a dollar. It embraces first the street car ride to the ferry, then the ride on the ferry boat to Sausalito, the ride on the electric train to Mill Valley, and from there the hike to the top of the mountain. For those who do not care for the hike, a train makes several trips daily to the summit and back.

From the observatory at the top on all sides spreads out a panoramic view that once seen can never be forgotten; to the north a view of the inland valley almost to the city of Sacramento; to the south and east one may see San Francisco bay and all the bay cities; and to the south and west, miles and miles of coast line, and farther out the mighty Pacific.

On the way back a detour is made to visit the famous group of giant redwood trees, Muir Woods, the gift to the government of Representative Kent, whose death occurred a few days ago.

The lunch eaten at the top of the mountain, the happy comradeship of teachers and pupils, the long day in the open, the tired aching muscles, even the shower at the end of the day, are now all happy memories to be cherished all our lives.

Below are some of the limericks reminiscent of the trip, which were written in the English class next day at school.

All the children were happy and gay
When we went up to Mt. Tamalpais
The sun was shining very bright,
But this was all changed to night.

For the rain came down,
And all of the children were nearly drowned.

We went on a hike one day last week.

Ullissue's heels were very weak;
While walking along through some slippery mud,
Ullissue's heels came off with a thud.

We went on a hike one day.
When we started we were very gay,
But when it was ended
'Twas not so splendid;

We were all quite ready to hit the hay.

The other day we went on a hike
Up Mt. Tamalpais, which we all did like;

We had angel food cake,
Which Mrs. Frary did make;
It melted in our mouths like a dainty snowflake.

Before we got back it started to rain,

And we were glad to turn home again.

We hiked in the dark on a muddy road,

But all of us were very bold.

By "Joe's Place" and the Big Lagoon,

And we didn't get back any too soon.

When we got home and went to bed
Some of us had a pain in the head,
We went on a hike one sunny morn,
Full of laughter and full of song;

'Twas dark and rainy when we started home,
Stiff and aching in every bone.
Although 'twas the end of a perfect day,

We were all quite glad to hit the hay.

Former Resident Passes Away

The many friends of Marian Grunds, of San Carlos, were sorry to hear of her passing away on Monday of last week. Mrs. Grunds was formerly Miss Marian Sullivan and resided for many years on Crocker avenue.

HAVE RIGHT TO BE PROUD OF SCHOOLS

Have you ever realized the immense growth of Daly City's school life? As one observes the large number of pupils of all ages on their way to and from the schools of our district, they can hardly imagine it to be the same place of ten years ago, when the district was sparsely settled as far as families are concerned.

When one visualizes the fact that almost every new family moving into a home in this district has on an average of from one to three children, most of whom are of school age, and the goodly number of new homes that have come into our midst in the last few years, the school housing question bids fair to demand an expansion program in the very near future. Possibly it will mean slightly increased taxation for a limited period, but as our city develops, in proportion will values increase, and our citizens will feel the benefit of a live, growing neighborhood with a definite objective and an assured future. And so will our schools become more numerous, and the teaching staffs be augmented, until the school system of Daly City will far outshine any community of its size in California.

Daly City and Jefferson school district has been particularly fortunate in its Superintendent of Schools, one of the district's most ardent boosters and a factor of real vital help in getting our educational program so far along to its present high standard. Prof. W. J. Savage, who is loved and respected by young and old alike, has been a booster of the 100 per cent kind for this section, and when all our new residents become imbued with the same fine progressive spirit, there will be no stopping our onward and upward march.

We wonder if we who live in this clean little community, so free from the bickerings and grafts of larger municipalities, really appreciate how much of this splendid 100 per cent service we get from our public officials, who have given years of their time almost wholly to developing Daly City. It is only a matter of time until the whole district will be of a size to be reckoned with, and it is then that we will appreciate all the good that these men are doing and have done in the past.

Our high school is an achievement of vision on the part of our progressive citizens that will be a lasting tribute to their efforts. The present faculty of our schools is unsurpassed for proficiency, and as the majority of them are Daly City residents, their interests are just so much localized, and their knowledge of the pupils is a personal one, outside of the school angles. We are justly proud of our schools and the men and women who are supervising the education of our children.

Therefore, when you are called upon to support those who are endeavoring to better our living, working and educational conditions, let's not criticise, but BOOST!

TENDERED SURPRISE PARTY ON TWELFTH BIRTHDAY

Miss Gladys Eldrup, of Roosevelt avenue, was given a surprise party on Friday evening of last week by her mother and schoolmates, in honor of her twelfth birthday. It was a genuine surprise, and the young folks were royally entertained by Mrs. Eldrup and Mrs. Mansfield, who were hostesses for the evening.

Those who came to wish Gladys a happy birthday were: Marian Mansfield, Myrtle Augusten, Gladys Elbert, Gladys Oakley, Mildred Mansfield, Dorothy Eldrup, Mary Murray, Pearl Smith, Helen Reinhart, Edythe Cockran, Mary Moran, Rose Moran, Mrs. Mansfield, Mrs. Julian; Wayne Swanson, Buster Eldrup, Grover Martin, Fred Bastak, Ronald Martin, Glen Emery, James Murray, Theo. OBSERVE THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF MOVING INTO NEW HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Thorpe, of 56 Risel avenue, entertained a large gathering of their friends at their home last Saturday evening. The occasion was in celebration of the third anniversary of moving into their new home.

The evening was spent playing progressive whist, and at midnight dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Jack MacFarlane, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ayres, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Green, of Monterey; Mr. and Mrs. James McCaskie, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Mackenzie, Mr. and Mrs. A. Allsop, Mr. and Mrs. Wyrseh, Mr. and Mrs. J. Baird, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Smith, Mrs. M. J. Osborn, of Sebastopol; Mrs. S. Leavell, Roy and Evelyn Thorpe.

OVER TWO HUNDRED HOMES ERECTED HERE DURING YEAR

City Clerk B. C. Ross reports the issuance of but two building permits during the past week, Sophia Martin, 992 Brunswick street, one room addition, and J. E. Raser, 149 Peoria street, addition. While the building permits for the week were unusually light, it is a fact that two hundred and sixteen homes were built in Daly City during the last year from January 1, 1927, to January 1, 1928.

PARENTE NEAR END OF TRAIL AS THE RESULT OF SHOOTING

Joe Parente, well known in San Mateo county and all along the Pacific coast, for his alleged run-running activities, and who has been a fugitive from justice for some time, is said to be lying at the point of death in a hospital in British Columbia, as the result of being shot by his former associates.

It is claimed that Parente, who was known as the king of run-runners, tricked his former henchmen out of $25,000, which he used to make his escape. It is said that they trailed him to Canada, but returned to San Francisco with the promise that they would find the money waiting for them. It was not forthcoming, so they made a second trip and would have killed him, but he escaped. The men learned that he was in British Columbia and made a third trip. This time they cornered him, and he was seriously wounded, it is said.

ANNUAL TRACK MEET AT STANFORD, MAY 5

On May 5, at Stanford University oval, under the auspices of San Jose State College, the State Colleges and Junior Colleges of California, from Santa Barbara to Chico, eleven in number, will stage their annual track meet, in which approximately 200 athletes will participate.

This California Coast Conference has records comparing favorably with the other conferences of the state. In a majority of events, the marks surpass those of the Southern California Conference; in all events they better those of the Far Western Conference, and compare favorably with those of the Pacific Coast Conference.

The competition this year is expected to be the best of any of the previous seasons, all of the schools putting forth good teams.

BELMONT HAS NEWSPAPER

The Belmont Courier is the latest addition to the list of newspapers in San Mateo county. The Courier is a newsy little sheet and should be given the support of the community. E. J. Halcrow, the publisher of the Courier, was at one time connected with the Daly City Record, and has many friends here who will wish him success in his new venture.

NEW PENINSULA TAX BODY IS ORGANIZED

A new civic-political organization has been formed at San Mateo. The new organization, known as the San Mateo County Taxpayers' Association, is now composed of San Mateo, Burlingame and Hillsborough citizens, is expected to become a county-wide, aggressive factor in governmental affairs.

Its first activity, according to Harlod L. Pierce, acting secretary, will be to participate actively in the San Mateo high school situation, and get behind two strong men for the two vacant trusteeships.

The association has for its function investigation of governmental affairs, obtaining impartial information and making same available to the people, and to see that government is efficiently and economically conducted. No member of the new association can hold public office, and the following are, in addition to Secretary Pierce, the temporary officers: H. P. Vollmen, president; Frank N. Smith, vice-president; H. J. De Vries, second vice-president; and Frank H. Boring, treasurer.

PRE-EASTER SERMON AT THE M. E. CHURCH

Dr. Carl Warner will be the preacher on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock at the Daly City Methodist church. Mrs. Gowan will sing, accompanied by Miss Daisy Gowan. Prof. T. Eugene Goudey will play for the entire service.

Sunday morning the pastor will preach his fourth in a series of Pre-Easter sermons, based on Rev. S. D. Gordon's book, "Quiet Talks on Power." You cannot fail to hear this message.

The Sunday school is enjoying a prosperous time, and plans are now under way for the Easter program. We hope to have one of the largest Sunday schools of any church of equal size in the California Conference.

We will appreciate any donations that may be forthcoming toward the proposed basketball and volleyball court. It will mean a great thing for the boys and girls of the community. We need your help in raising the funds. Some money has already been subscribed by outsiders, but not quite enough to begin work upon it. Please communicate with the pastor, Delaware 2131, if you are interested and want to help us.

We sincerely hope that our church may become your church, and that you will some day be able to say: This is my church. Here through helpful service I come close to God and to my human comrades in worship. Here in many ways I learn the truths by which I may live a brave, happy, useful life. Here I gain the strength by which I become that which I have learned I ought to be. Here I find comfort in by sorrow, courage in my struggle, joy in my victories. Here I come into union with Christ, my Master and Friend.

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

PAVING WORK BEGUN ON BAY SHORE ROAD

Paving work is being done on the Bay Shore highway. Contractors are now working in the territory in the vicinity of Mills Field, San Francisco's municipal airport.

When the Bay Shore highway from South San Francisco to Broadway, Burlingame, is thrown open to the motorists again, it will be one of the finest roads in the bay region. In addition, it will do much to relieve the present congestion that exists because of insufficient arteries to take care of the Sunday and holiday traffic.

It is predicted that it will be only a comparatively short time until the new road will have been completely paved.

When the grading on the new highway from South San Francisco to Broadway was completed some months ago, the dirt road was thrown open to travel, even before the tunnel under the Southern Pacific tracks was completed. Shortly after the rains set in the thoroughfare was closed and work began breaking up the surface and preparing it for paving operations that are now under way.

SHORTAGE OF FUNDS CLOSES
PALO ALTO JUNIOR COLLEGE

One academic year will be the length of time the Junior College department of the Palo Alto Union high school remains in existence, according to a recent announcement. The Junior College department was inaugurated last September and will close at the end of this term, because of shortage of funds. This news will be of especial interest to those connected with the San Mateo Junior College, for it is assumed that many of the Palo Alto students will transfer to the San Mateo college.

CANDLESTICK BRIDGE
FRANCHISE IS DENIED
BY COUNTY BOARD

At a meeting of the San Mateo county board of supervisors at Redwood City, last Monday, the Mansfield franchise for a bridge at Candlestick Point in San Mateo county was denied, the board reversing its action of a week previous.

By unanimous action the supervisors rescinded their action of the week before, granting the franchise. They also by unanimous vote denied the application for a franchise when it was again presented by Albert Mansfield, immediately after the vote had been taken to rescind the action of the board on March 5.

Mansfield asked for a continuance of the franchise without action, for four weeks, with a further continuance until the Rincon hill permit could be acted upon definitely. The supervisors, however, denied this request.

At the meeting on March 5, when the application for a franchise was considered, Supervisors Thomas L. Hickey, Manuel Francis and C. V. Thompson voted in favor of granting Mansfield a franchise. At last Monday's meeting they voted with Chairman Poole and Mrs. Rosalie Brown, refusing the issuance of a franchise.

The supervisors acted in the presence of a throng that jammed the chambers, filled the corridors and overflowed into the streets of Redwood City. It was estimated that more than 2,500 people, virtually all protestants against the issuance of a franchise, attended the session.

When the supervisors were called to order, Mrs. Rosalie Brown moved to rescind the franchise. Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey asked for discussion and got it.

Mayor James Rolph, Jr., heading the San Francisco delegation, that included the entire board of supervisors, pleaded with the San Mateo board to reject the Candlestick Point measure. He outlined San Francisco's bridge plans and declared that a franchise for a bridge at Candlestick Point would hamper them. "If you grant this bridge franchise," he said, "we are barred from building the Rincon Hill-Alamada bridge." Mayor Rolph promised San Mateo county the co-operation of San Francisco in the tri-counties highway project, as well as in other development plans. "Tell us what you want and we'll play ball with you," he said.

Besides Mayor Rolph, the denial of the franchise by San Mateo county's supervisors was asked for in talks by Supervisors James McSheehy, Frank Havener, Warren Shannon, Andrew Gallagher and Walter Schmidt. Mrs. John L. McGinn, president of the San Mateo Woman's Club, spoke in behalf of local citizens.

R. J. Hatch, of South San Francisco, presented a petition from residents of that city and San Francisco favoring the franchise, and J. Walker, a manufacturer or South San Francisco, favored giving the San Francisco supervisors a year in which to get permission for the building of the Rincon hill project.

Supervisor Manuel Francis reversed his vote of the week previous. He was assured that the coast road would be taken care of.

Supervisor Hickey made a strong plea for the bridge project, but declared that he was willing to wait until Congress passed upon the bill now pending permitting the Rincon hill bridge, and was willing to go to Washington and help get it through. He favored a resolution by the local board endorsing the Rincon hill project. His advocacy of the Candlestick franchise, he explained, was based on the belief that this would serve the automobile traffic of San Francisco better than the Rincon hill bridge.

ST. MAXIMUS' ENTERTAINMENT

From time immemorial it has been the custom to relax from the Lenten penitential discipline on St. Patrick's day as a tribute to the life and missionary labors of this great apostle. In accordance with this tradition, St. Maximus parish is holding an entertainment in the Daly City Auditorium on next Saturday night, March 17, an entertainment which will be a great treat to the people of the parish. Recognized talent from San Francisco and the East Bay will be present to render a delightful and varied program. The doors will open at 8 p. m., and the program will start promptly at 8:30.

After the show is over, an orchestra will be on hand to render dance music for the young people of the parish. As a special attraction, Miss MacKenzie, late of Wellington, New Zealand, and champion Irish step-dancer of Australia, will be on hand to entertain us. She will be accompanied by Mr. John Cameron on the bagpipes.

WOULD LET DOWN BARS TO MEXICANS

Gradually the public is awakening to the dangers of the tide of immigration to this country and are attempting to stem the tide by efforts of the opposition to a restrictive policy before it is too late. The main attack of the latter has been upon the immigration act of 1924, and numerous measures have been introduced in Congress to undermine the strength of its provisions. They succeeded in postponing for one year the enactment of the national origins clause of the act, which was supposed to have been put into effect last July, and, as the time for its enactment again draws near, it is contended that the provisions of this clause are not practical and that it is not possible to determine the quotas of the different countries upon such a basis.

Such contentions are not supported by facts. In response to a resolution passed by the Senate on February 23, the President submitted to that body a copy of the joint communication of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Secretary of Labor, on calculations as to what the immigration quotas would be as provided under the national origins clause of the immigration act of 1924.

In this report it was shown that a total of 153,685 immigrants would be permitted entry—a reduction of about 7,000 over the present number of admittants. The quotas were estimated as follows for the various countries: Austria, 1,629; Belgium, 1,328; Czechoslovakia, 2,726; Denmark, 1,234; France, 3,308; Germany, 24,908; Great Britain and Northern Ireland, 65,894; Greece, 312; Hungary, 1,181; Irish Free State, 17,427; Italy, 5,989; Japan, 100; Latvia, 243; Lithuania, 492; Netherlands, 3,083; Norway, 2,403; Palestine, 100; Poland, 6,090; Russia (European and Asiatic), 3,540; Switzerland, 1,614; Sweden, 3,339; Turkey, 233; Yugoslavia, 739.

The effect of proportioning the immigration on a basis of the racial stock of this country is obvious when it is shown that at present Germany is getting a quota of 51,227; the Irish Free State 28,567, while the present quota for England, Scotland and Northern Ireland is only about 34,007.

In support of the national origins clause, Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, said that he did not believe it to be a fact that these estimates have been unsupported at any time by responsible evidence. "I will say," the Senator stated, "that the national origins quotas have been the subject of constant quota; that we are now advised by the Census Bureau that they are confident of the accuracy of the quotas as last established by their study; and that it is quite incorrect to state that they are 'unsupported by documentary evidence,' or that they are unsupported by other kinds of evidence."

The question of extending the quota law to Mexico and the Latin-American countries has also recently been discussed in Congress, and Representative John C. Box, of Texas, has introduced a bill to that effect. The rapid increase of immigration from Mexico in the last few years has caused alarm. According to reliable statistics, it swelled from 15,000 in 1914 to 60,000 in 1926, and last year approached the 70,000 mark. The contention is that the farmers of the Southwest would be hindered in obtaining labor if such a bill was passed, but recent figures showing the large number of unemployed in this country make the possibility of a scarcity of labor seem hardly probable.

It does not require a great strain upon the imagination to vision, even at the rate aliens are now entering the United States, an overpopulated country in the future, consisting of peoples of divided interests and allegiances; a large number of unemployed, lowering the average wages and standard of living; a conglomeration of citizens of different languages and nationalities, or, in other words, destruction. Such a calamity can best be avoided by restrictive immigration and a sufficient personnel to see that the immigration laws are strictly enforced.

LATIN AMERICA URGED TO OPPOSE UNITED STATES

The newspapers of Spain and Italy are urging the Latin-American republics to combine with their countries and form a combination of Latin civilization to oppose the United States, according to an article in the Chicago American. The newspapers in Rome, it is said, point out that South America should seek Spanish and Italian co-operation in order to enable it to resist the "practical submission in which they find themselves because of the Monroe Doctrine. This doctrine a century ago may have represented a principle of national defense, but today it is only a mask for the maintenance of the United States' hegemony over the other republics on the continent."

Satisfaction is indicated in Rome, the article continues, at the tendency which the Italians see in Argentina to form a strong bloc of states opposed to the United States. The Fascist syndicalist organ, Lavoro D'Italia, says:

"It is evident that resistance to North American preeminence is shaping in various forms. In the Pacific Japan is closely watching Philippine affairs. Naval rivalry between the United States and England is reviving, despite abortive conferences to suppress it."

A fellow who wants to work out a universal peace plan might get some valuable experience through trying to keep harmony in a church choir for a while.

A movement is on foot to reduce crime among our alien population. Possibly keeping them from associating with the native population would help.

The Statue of Liberty is to have a bath this spring. And the thing it stands for needs a tonic.

WATCH YOUR ARMS WHEN DRIVING AUTO

"Watch your arms and make them snap into it" when giving a driving signal for your machine. We are going to watch every motorist on the streets of Daly City during the next few weeks and lay particular stress upon the proper use of arm signals."

This statement is made by Chief of Police Doyle, who has joined the state wide educational work being carried on by the Public Safety Conference of the California Development Association, and with all other Police Chiefs in the state of California will stress the proper use of arm signals for the next month. Each month a co-operative educational campaign is carried out in some phase of driving. This month is Arm Signal month.

Chief Doyle further states: "Statistics show that 19 per cent of automobile accidents are caused by the improper use of arm signals, because 75 per cent of our citizens either do not know how to properly use arm signals, or are careless in the use of them. The man behind is also guilty. He is not always alert to signals from the car ahead. The result is either a broken fender or a vital accident."

"More than 1,600 citizens died last year as a result of automobile accidents. Ninety-five per cent of these accidents were preventable. Let the citizens of this community be alert."

WET—BUT IT BURNED

Usually, when material is wet—thoroughly soaked—there is no need to worry about the possibility of fire. That's a "joker" in the pile though, when hay is the subject of wetting.

A barn located in New Hampshire, during the floods in November, 1927, was particularly wet, being partially submerged. And it contained hay! The owner started to remove the hay when the water had subsided sufficiently, but spontaneous combustion beat him to it. Result—the barn was burned to the ground.

Spontaneous combustion is perhaps the least understood of all causes of fire. That's probably the reason why it does so much damage—over fifteen million dollars in 1926, according to figures computed by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Take your own home for instance. How about that cellar, that attic and that garage? Don't forget the clothes closets either! Remove any piles of rags, paper or rubbish. Such materials may be oily or wet without your knowledge. If so, look out! You may wake up in the middle of the night and wonder how you ever got into such a hot place.

Better look around now before any damage is done.

THIEVES HIGHLY ORGANIZED

"Fences" organized along highly efficient business lines dispose annually of loot valued at five hundred million dollars, according to Newton D. Baker, chairman of the National Crime Commission. Mr. Baker, who was formerly Secretary of War, made public this estimate of annual loss from thefts in a statement announcing the introduction in Congress of a bill designed to stop the activities of receivers of stolen goods.

Concerning the work of the committee, Mr. Baker says: "This committee, with the advice of men who have given much previous study to the question, has made an exhaustive survey of the situation, and from the statements of public prosecutors, chiefs of police and business firms throughout the country, is convinced that the claim that the losses from this source amount to more than five hundred million dollars yearly, is more than justified."

Mr. Baker's report shows that the solitary burglar is disappearing, and that his place is being taken by criminals well organized, who make thefts of merchandise on a large scale. He expresses the belief that commercially organized thieves would dissolve their bands overnight if their "fences," their market or outlet, were eliminated.

With such tremendous thefts, burglary and robbery insurance is being called upon to protect the public from losses which, in the aggregate, are running well up toward the total of the annual destruction caused by fire in the nation. The casualty insurance companies are stepping into the breach to repay much of the disastrous loss caused by robbery, but they must have public co-operation along lines of crime prevention, just as fire insurance companies have similar co-operation along lines of fire prevention, if this terrific annual drain on the country's resources is to be checked or reduced.

THAT SHOULD HOLD HIM

"I don't suppose you keep anything so civilized as dog biscuits in this one-horse, run-down, jay town, do you?" the tourist snarled.

"Oh, yes, stranger," the village merchant responded pleasantly. "Quite a few folks like you come through from the city, and we aim to have everything called for. Have 'em in a bag or eat 'em here."—Boston News Bureau.

The nations are thinking up more horrible means to employ in the next "unthinkable" war.

PREPARES FOR NATION'S GREATEST TOURING YEAR

Anticipating the greatest motor touring season on record, directing executives of organized motordom of the nation will plan for a movement of 44,000,000 vacationists on the highways this year at the annual conference of secretaries of the affiliated American Automobile Association clubs to be held in Washington, D. C., March 21, 22 and 23. D. E. Watkins, secretary and general manager of the California State Automobile Association, largest of the 1,000 affiliated A. A. A. clubs which blanket the nation, will represent motordom of this state at the conference.

Record proportions of the annual hebra of motordom to the great outdoors this year and many legislative matters pending in Congress which vitally concern the motorist make this gathering of the Three A club executives one of the most important in years. The conference will constitute a gathering of the nation's directors of motor touring traffic, since A. A. A. touring bureaus route millions of motorists each season. Extension of emergency road service offered by members units of the American Automobile Association to a nation-wide basis will be discussed and Watkins will tell of the state-wide service of this nature provided free to California Association members and its extension on a basis of nominal cost throughout the Pacific coast.

California's part in welcoming the touring motorist to the West and the importance of Federal aid legislation in Congress to Western states will also be stressed by Watkins.

UNFETTERED DEVELOPMENT OF ELECTRICITY ESSENTIAL

"Of one thing I am more positive than I was even forty years ago—the electrical development of America has only well begun," declared Thomas A. Edison in a recent statement.

"Great days are ahead of this nation and the world, and electricity will have a vital part to play, granted only that it can be unfettered, with full opportunity for the largest possible individual initiative and energy."

"I have lived to see the street car, elevator, electrified railroad, automobile, phonograph, motion picture, radio, airplane, and the beginning of television. It seems today to many, as it seemed to most men and women in 1882, that no great forward steps remain to be taken which are comparable to those already taken."

"It may be that the next 40 years will not produce inventions of such revolutionary character. Progress has been so rapid that we may require a breathing spell in which to consolidate our gains and develop present inventions to the full capacities."

"So long as there remains a single task being done by men or women which electricity could do as well, so long will that development be incomplete. What this development will mean in comfort, in leisure, and in opportunity for the larger life of the spirit, we have only begun to realize."

FACTS, NOT FIREWORKS

That the Federal Trade Commission intends to push its investigation of the electric power and gas companies vigorously and without delay, is indicated by the resolution adopted less than two days after the Senate instructed it to proceed.

The wording of the resolution is reassuring to the people that "an inquiry will be undertaken immediately in strict and full compliance" with the order of the Senate, and that there will be "a diligent and complete performance of the ends and purposes set forth" in the instructions from the Senate.

The Federal Trade Commission was originally created on the demand of ultra-progressive groups to overhaul and investigate so-called big business. Apparently its findings, which have been arrived at in an orderly and legal manner, have not been sufficiently spectacular for political purposes. Therefore it has been criticized in political circles (not so much by the people) and the cry raised for a Senate investigating committee for the power industry, instead of the Federal Trade Commission. The Senate as a whole, however, refused to be stampeded, and the power industry will be investigated by the Federal Trade Commission.

So far the Commission, in spite of heckling and unfair attacks, has moved with commendable speed, and there is every reason to believe that its investigation of the power companies will be more thorough and of more value to the people as a whole than would a spectacular political inquiry.

PROGRESS IN MINING

It is said that greater progress has been made in the past year in developing cheap and efficient processes for saving the values in low-grade ores than in any other year in the mining history of America. The day of guesswork mining is gone. In its place comes scientific skill that takes the old dumps that broke the backs and bank accounts of the early giants, and turns them into profit.

Leading industries of the nation are dependent upon the successful operation of western metal mining, and are vitally interested in state and national policies which encourage mining operations.

Mr. Stewart won't talk, while Senator Heflin won't do anything else.

Sylvia of the Minute

By Helen R. Martin

"Oh! What makes you think such a thing?"

"A young teacher at William Penn school who is suspiciously ignorant of these United States and occasionally, when she isn't on her guard, falls into rather an English accent! She's supposed to be Sam Schwenckton's niece or cousin; she lives at his farm and her name is Schwenckton. But she's quite unlike the other county teachers. Rather distingue; a thoroughbred; the only teacher in the county that ventures to cheek me!" he grinned.

"Gracious. Don't let it make a prig of you, this job of superintending a lot of women teachers! It's enough to! I won't have you spotted like that! But your suspicions—they seem rather fantastic, dear!"

"Yes," Marvin gave it up, "I suppose they do. May I see the photograph, please?"

Mrs. Creighton pointed to a book on the table behind the couch. Holding a "cabinet-sized" photograph near the table lamp, he examined it eagerly. It was the face of a girl of fifteen; short, curly hair, fine features, a sensitive mouth, a serious, rather melancholy expression.

Undoubtedly there was a resemblance—the same wide-open innocent eyes and sensitive mouth. And yet it was not definite or strong enough to be unmistakable, by any means. He could not feel sure. Far from it. What resemblance there was might easily be a coincidence. This photograph gave no suggestion of that vivid sparkle of his young teacher's face, her gay riot of color, her charm. It looked rather insipid. And yet—

"Well?" asked his mother. "Of course it isn't your young teacher?"

"I can hardly tell—I'm not sure—"

"But is there any resemblance?" she asked incredulously.

"Yes," he answered hesitatingly. "Yes, there is. May I keep this?"

"Of course. But, Marvin, the thing is too impossible!"

"I suppose so. Look here, Mother, will you call on Miss Schwenckton and see what you think about her? Notice her accent. Sometimes she seems to me to be deliberately disguising it!"

"But, dear, what possible excuse could I give for calling on her? Wouldn't she and the Schwencktons think it very queer? I'd feel embarrassed!"

"But aside from my little suspicion, I'd like you to call on her just because she's so worth knowing. You'd find her a lot more your kind than that Quo Non Ascendus crowd!"

His mother's ears detected something in his voice, her swift glance saw something in his face, that caught her breath.

"All right, dear." Suddenly she turned to him and clasped his hand almost convulsively. "Oh, Marvin, dear, do you realize that if you took up with a county school teacher, a relative of Sam Schwenckton, that would be the last straw to your father! He'd never, never look at you again! Of course, I know that could not stop you if you loved—"

Marvin laughed. "Don't worry, dear! You're the only girl I've ever been in love with! What makes you imagine I'm going to 'take up' with Miss Schwenckton?"

"Now perhaps," she said ruefully as she noticed that his face had grown red, "I've just put it into your head."

"Perhaps you have," he slowly answered. "Perhaps if she isn't our English cousin—"

"Which she surely isn't, dear! Living at the Schwenckton farm and teaching that school—Lady Sylvia St. Croix! Unthinkable!"

"Well, if she isn't—if she's just herself—she certainly is fetching! But if she's the something-more-than-meets-the-eye, that I half suspect, I wouldn't touch her with tongs!"

"But why? Isn't that unreasonable prejudice?"

"Not at all. If she's a tricky schemer, out after our money, she's not the sort of girl she seems to be—and it's only the sort of girl she seems to be that I might fall for—though I hasten to assure you I've no idea she'd fall for me!"

His mother laughed. She had never yet met the girl who, if given a chance, would not "fall for" either one of her fine sons. And, of course, with the additional lure of their millions, who could resist them? Surely not a county teacher of the Schwenckton breed!—though, of course, she must be, as Marvin insisted, far above her relatives or he could hardly find her so interesting and so presentable that he would ask his mother to call on her. Well, this certainly needed looking into! She would lose no time in calling on the young woman.

"I'm curious to know, Mother, how you'll size up Miss Schwenckton. Will you go to see her soon? On Monday?"

"What time will she be home from school?"

"School closes at four. By the way, to avoid the curiosity of the farmer's family, it might be better, perhaps, to call on her at her school just at closing time."

"I'll be glad to avoid the curiosity of the farmer's family," his mother assented.

So it seemed that our young school mistress was booked for something of a reception at her schoolhouse at four o'clock on Monday afternoon: Mr. Creighton plotting to visit her with the determination to bundle her out of the neighborhood, because he saw in her the final and strongest hindrance to his son's desirable marriage with Lady Sylvia St. Croix; Mrs. Creighton planning to discover, in the course of a friendly call, whether the girl were no other than she whom her husband desired as his elder son's bride, desiring it so urgently that he would stop at nothing to gain its fulfillment.

The stage was all set, it seemed, for a scene dramatic enough to satisfy even Meely's insatiable love of his trionics.

CHAPTER VIII

Meely's idea in addressing the county teachers on Saturday morning at their monthly institute was not so much to be instructive and pedagogical, as to be entertaining. So she chose for her subject "Shakespeare's Women." That title, while looking educational on the program would give her a chance to riot in a dramatic orgy—speeches of Lady Macbeth, Portia, Desdemona, Juliet—she would have the time of her life!

"Well?" Asked the Mother. "Of course it isn't your Young Teacher?"

And as she would never see these women again she need not bother with her accent, which would be a great relief.

Meely had assured herself, before launching forth, that the superintendent was not present. And once she "got going," she was too transported from the world about her to notice, towards the end of the session while she was giving "the balcony scene," that Mr. Creighton had slipped unobtrusively and quite noiselessly into a back seat.

When, therefore, the meeting being over and she putting on her wraps, she suddenly saw him coming toward her across the length of the room, she was startled and rather perturbed.

"I've got my roadster out here—I'll drive you home," he stated.

She did not quite fancy this form of address; why didn't he ask her whether he might drive her home?

"Oh, I won't trouble you; the trolley will take me nearly all the way," she lightly dismissed him.

"But my roadster will take you the whole way."

"Thank you, no."

"But why?" he asked, surprised. "I'm not going home. I think I'll go in to Sunbury and treat myself to a hotel meal and a cinema—movie," she hastily corrected herself.

"Good! I'm going to Sunbury myself. Have lunch with me, will you? I'll even go to see a cinema—with you!"

In her pleased surprise at such a jolly invitation (for to be in Marvin Creighton's company was rather perilously exciting and Meely was lonely) she dropped her cool manner with rather startling suddenness and assented with childish delight.

The day was clear, the air delicious, the roads in good condition. Marvin's car delightfully easy and comfortable; and Meely, freed from school-room drudgery and, for the first time in weeks, from the atmosphere of the Schwenckton household, felt a sudden hilarious gaiety, a tingling in her blood, such as she had not experienced since she had undertaken the serious profession of the teacher.

"Oh!" she laughed gleefully, fairly bouncing in her seat, "what a lark! It makes me feel young again!"

"Me, too!" responded Marvin, his eyes snapping. "Pedagogy could dry one up at the roots, couldn't it—if," he conscientiously added, "one didn't fight to keep it a living thing."

"I try not to take it too seriously," said Meely.

"A shockingly imprudent thing to admit to your superintendent! I suppose," he remarked ironically, "you look upon your work merely as a stepping-stone to something else?"

"Oh, dear, yes! I don't expect to be a school teacher all my days! Gracious!"

"A stepping-stone to marriage, I suppose?"

"What a good guesser you are! But why be high-hat about that? Woman's place is in the home, isn't it?"

"It's not been for the past ten years. You are a back number!"

"You surprise me. I thought I was ahead of my times, because," she said with sad conviction, "I'm sure I couldn't make any man happy if I had to do his housework."

"Will you tell me," he inquired in a tone of dulcet gentleness, "why you adopt a Pennsylvania accent when you talk to me and an English accent when you recite Shakespeare?"

"Oh," she lightly responded, "that's just my platform manner—I've acted quite a bit—"

"Professionally?" he demanded, startled.

"Both in private theatricals and professionally."

"What, then, made you ever turn to teaching?"

"Working my way to Hollywood." Marvin looked rather staggered, for this knocked out his suspicion as to who she was and put a very wet blanket indeed upon a hope he was half consciously cherishing.

"Do you think," he asked somewhat stiffly, "it's right to use our schools as a stepping-stone for your ambitions?"

"I'd use every school in this county for my ambition if I'd the chance to!—and all the trustees and even the superintendent himself. Now throw me out of your car! Take my job from me if you think me base and unprincipled! I don't care! I've nearly enough money saved anyway to get to Hollywood. Anyway, I believe I could get there sooner by cooking my way out—cooks earn so much more than college presidents in America!"

"Do your parents uphold you in this ambition of yours?"

"Now you are a back number!—parents' influence having passed out eleven years ago."

"Your parents are living?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

A perceptible pause. "Reading, Pennsylvania."

"Any brothers and sisters?"

"No—my only brother was killed in the World War and—" She stopped short; she had spoken impulsively; Marvin wondered whether emotion for her slaughtered brother—or something else—had checked so abruptly her statement of a coincidence.

He would test her a bit. "That's odd," he remarked, "I have an English cousin whose only son was killed in the World War and his only other child is a daughter about your age!"

"What's odd about it?"

"Rather a coincidence, don't you think?"

"Why, no. There must have been thousands of such coincidences, surely."

Says Too Many Girls Are Slovens at Home

Many women of today have a "peasant walk"—the heavy tread of one who tramps in stiff shoes on rough roads—Temple Bailey, popular novelist, told Hildegarde Fillmore in an interview for McCall's.

"Perhaps there is no place where a girl's beauty means so much as in her home," says Miss Bailey. "As she grows up from childhood to young womanhood she feels that she must be attractive, that she must impress the world with her personality. And she should be encouraged to make herself charming, not by artificial means alone but by learning all the arts which may enhance her natural loveliness. Too often, I'm afraid, she thinks only of her appearance in school, at business, on the street, or at parties. At home she slumps into slovenly habits. Her clothes are untidy, her hair carelessly dressed. Her family becomes critical; they nag and tease."

Urges War on Weevil

A "yellow peril" among insect pests is taking the place of a "native American" nuisance, according to O. E. Gookins, of Ottawa, Kan., in an address before the meeting at Omaha of the American Association of Cereal Chemists. The once troublesome grain weevil, he said, is becoming extinct, but its decline is accompanied by the increase of the rice weevil. The two insects look very much alike, but the rice weevil can easily be distinguished because it can fly. Mr. Gookins recommended granary fumigation as a cheap and sure method of finishing off the granary weevil for good, and for combating the hordes of the rice weevil.

Spitz Good Sheep Tender

The Pomeranian sheep dog, better known as the Spitz dog, is bred in most countries as a house pet, small and useless. But in its own home on the shores of the Baltic this dog is the local sheep tender. He has a fox-like face and very long hair. In color he ranges over a wide scale, but black or white is most common, and the average weight is about eight pounds. The Spitz stands cold weather much better than warm.

AIDING CRIPPLES

Among the many humanitarian activities which engage the support of benevolent societies and individuals, the restoring of crippled children to health and happiness is one of the most commendable.

The work of modern surgeons in this connection is effective almost beyond belief. At a recent convention of the International Society for Crippled Children it was stated that "modern science has healed all manner of diseases and we are happy to say today that practically every type of malformation, if taken in early childhood, can be cured."

Among the organizations which have given special attention to crippled children, the Shriners have been particularly active, each member of the order contributing regularly to the maintenance of homes for these unfortunate little ones, who would otherwise go through life with deformed bodies and limbs. Other societies are doing a similar service for humanity, and so widespread has the movement become that a world-wide conference of workers for crippled children has been called to meet in Geneva, Switzerland, next year to more effectively coordinate the efforts in this direction.

The hearty encouragement and support of this labor of love should be extended by every person who is in a position to lend a hand.

Some of the funniest things we hear are said by people who take themselves seriously.

An Ohio woman routed a burglar by hitting him with a can of tomatoes. A case of being literally canned.

NEW MYSTERY MOTOR

Recent press dispatches give accounts of a new motor, invented by Lester J. Hendershot, of Pittsburgh, which is said to run without fuel, being an electro-magnetic affair, which draws its power "from the air or ground."

Preliminary tests made at Selfridge Field, Detroit, are reported to have excited the interest of several well known aviation experts, including Colonel Lindbergh, who witnessed the demonstration. Great secrecy surrounds the details of the invention, which has not yet been patented. Major Lanphier, army flight commander, is quoted as saying that while it appeared to have great possibilities, it was too early to tell what might come of it.

That a motor could be run without fuel seems preposterous at first glance, still so many seemingly impossible feats have been accomplished in harnessing the unseen forces of nature that one is hardly justified in being too skeptical. When first proposed, the X-ray, radio and many other epoch-making inventions appeared just as incredible.

On the other hand, the new device may be found to have no practical value. Further tests and developments will be necessary to determine whether it is to revolutionize the automotive world, or be discarded as just another dream which failed of realization.

Governor Al will get off to a good start if he can corral all the Smith vote.

If the Marines ever catch him they will take the sand out of Sandino.

TO FIX EASTER DATE

Many times it has been proposed to establish a more nearly uniform date for Easter Sunday, but tradition and custom are hard to overcome, so the old method of calculation, established by the Council of Nice more than 1,600 years ago, still prevails.

Under this system, Easter may fall as early as March 22 or as late as April 25, and all moveable feasts of the church are governed by the date of Easter.

Recently the British House of Commons passed a bill proposing that the legal date of Easter shall be the first Sunday after the second Saturday in April. It is not intended that the British shall put this proposal into effect alone, but the idea is to call a world conference to consider joint action of the nations on the subject.

There are many reasons, business and social, to commend the new plan, but inasmuch as such an innovation would clash with long established religious customs it is doubtful that it will be able to command support in ecclesiastical circles. Without such support it could not be given practical effect.

WHAT OF OLD AGE?

While not a pleasant subject to dwell upon, an occasional look ahead to the condition which may surround old age would be advisable, even for those whose circumstances in early life are satisfactory and whose future seems secure.

We may well be reminded that nearly 80 per cent of all old people are dependent upon others for support. Yet many of these in early and middle life were prosperous; and some even wealthy.

Who can not look about him and see acquaintances who were once the envy of their neighbors, but who through business reverses, accidents, illness or extravagance are now brought to feel the sting of poverty? Usually such disasters might have been averted by a reasonable exercise of prudence and thrift. Keeping up with one's neighbors in a false display of prosperity is one fruitful source of old age poverty, and there are many others. Much of the misery which usually accompanies old age might be avoided by looking ahead before it is too late.

NEW SOLDIER TESTS

In the army, as elsewhere, specialization is the order of the day, but certain qualifications recently set for enlisted men of the Fifteenth U. S. Infantry, destined for service in China, are the most exacting ever established for American doughboys.

Calling for volunteers for the regiment, the War Department frankly stated that applicants would have to face severe enlistment requirements. All former service men must show "Character: Excellent" upon their discharge certificates. Those without former service must be at least 25 years of age and "of unusually fine character and physique."

The foregoing tests might easily be met by a great number of available men, but one which may not be so easy is that which requires each soldier of the Fifteenth Infantry to be able to speak at least 300 words of Chinese.

Still, it might be worse. Suppose they had to read and write the language.

CUPID'S POOR SHOTS

Judging from the increasing prevalence of divorce and its attending evils, Cupid is doing some rather poor shooting these days. His darts have either failed to hit the mark, or having hit it failed to stick.

Convincing proof of this is seen in a recent statement from Detroit, where it is declared that not only are divorces reaching a high total, but alimony is assuming large proportions in the matrimonial picture. In that city it is said that no less than 11,000 divorced husbands are under orders to pay alimony, and 4,000 of them are prosecuted every year for failure to do so.

The number of recalcitrant husbands confined in the Detroit house of corrections for failing to pay alimony has run as high as 125, and at the time of the last report it was 116. Furthermore, it was stated that alimony payers in that city were increasing at the rate of about 70 a week.

Truly, Cupid seems to be making a mess of things nowadays.

FALSE CONFESSIONS

While there is no doubt that a large percentage of murderers and other criminals escape the punishment they deserve, the number of innocent persons who the convicted, some of whom are put to death is perhaps greater than is generally supposed.

This is true even among some who confess to the crimes with which they are charged, particularly in cases where confessions are extorted by "third degree" methods. Several cases were cited by Robert Cantwell of the Chicago bar recently, including the following:

In the Boorne case in Vermont, two brothers confessed to the murder, but the man supposed to have been murdered showed up later, alive and well.

In Illinois three Traylor brothers confessed to murdering a man named Fisher, and witnesses testified to having seen the dead body, yet Fisher turned up alive. In the same state a man named Turner was sentenced to death, but secured a new trial and before the second trial could be held the alleged victim returned.

These are only three out of a large number of similar cases cited by Mr. Cantwell, who declares that he has authentic records of no less than 129 persons who confessed and were executed for murders in which their supposed victims turned up alive afterward.

This is not intended as a plea for laxity in bringing the guilty to justice, but it serves to show the great responsibility which rests upon juries and judges, as well as to emphasize the unreliability of circumstantial evidence, even when accompanied by a confession of guilt, in some cases. It particularly illustrates the frightful injustice of lynching under any circumstances.

CHEAP FERTILIZER

Extensive experiments are to be carried out in the prairie provinces of Canada this year in the use of super-phosphates as fertilizer, according to W. J. Stevens, provincial field crops commissioner of Alberta.

It is said that a million tons of this material may be obtained yearly from a large smelting plant at Trail, B. C., which could be delivered to the farmers at a cost of less than 2 cents a pound. About 50 pounds is to be used to the acre.

The forthcoming experiments will be conducted through co-operation of government agencies and the Canadian Pacific Railway, along lines which already have been successfully employed in Australia and by the University of Saskatchewan, on a small scale.

Advantages claimed for fertilization by super-phosphates are the hastening of cereal crops to maturity, as well as enabling them to better resist extremely dry weather.

Cheap fertilizers are being demanded by agriculture everywhere, and the experiments contemplated by the Canadian province will be watched with keen interest.

In Munich, Germany, animals for slaughter are shocked into insensibility by electricity before being stabbed in a vital spot.

Roost at the Beach. A delicious spread was served to the following members at midnight: Lorraine Wall, Florence McKendrick, Annette Lucey, Sarah Battaini, Collista Dalton, Elsie Fahey, Tessie O'Connor, Christine Hume, Marge Kennedy, Katherine McKendrick, Marge O'Connor, Esther Forsell, Audrey Diamond and Julia Romer.

The New Colma Theatre, reopened last Saturday, under the management of the Garibaldi brothers, after having been renovated and comfortable new seats installed, is enjoying a splendid patronage, thus justifying the belief of the management that a cozy and comfortable theatre, supplying the best of attractions, would meet with the favor of the people of Colma and vicinity. At several performances it has been found necessary to install temporary seats to accommodate the crowd, and each performance sees the house comfortably filled. The success of the New Colma Theatre now seems assured.

SIDELIGHTS

Even a frog can get on the front page if he has a clever press agent. Considerable space has been given recently to a frog which is said to have been sealed in the cornerstone of the court house at Eastland, Texas, for 31 years, and found alive when the stone was opened a few days ago. Laymen and scientists argue over whether the story is truth or fake.

A belated battle of the Civil War is reported from an Arkansas poorhouse. A 93-year-old Union soldier and a 90-year-old Confederate were the belligerents who fought over the issues of 1861. When the smoke of battle had cleared away most of the poor farm dishes were found to be smashed, but neither of the combatants was seriously damaged.

Some odd excuses are offered by citizens seeking to escape jury duty. These samples are from Indiana: "I'm nervous; nothing serious; just jumpy fits." "I got 20 cows and nobody to milk 'em." "I'm an undertaker; besides my hearing is not very good."

Sir Thomas Lipton, tea merchant, yacht racer and all-round good sport, asked by New York reporters whether he objected to personal publicity in the newspapers, said: "I always ask reporters to put stories about me in an obscure corner of the front page."

Two famous race horses, In Memoriam and Zev, made sensational turf history by each defeating the other in 1923. By a queer twist of fate their owners are making sensational criminal history in 1928. Carl Wiedemann, owner of In Memoriam, has just entered upon a two-year term in Atlanta penitentiary for violating the Volstead Act, while Harry F. Sinclair, owner of Zev, is under jail sentence with other indictments pending in connection with Teapot Dome.

Last fall a negro, Robert M. Crowe, used the "help wanted" columns of the Chicago Tribune to lure a white woman to a house where he assaulted her. Indignant over this criminal use of its columns, the Tribune searched for the fiend relentlessly, caught him after five months and saw him sentenced to 60 years in the penitentiary.

Someone connected with the Boone, Iowa, Republican probably found it expedient to seek a new field of labor recently, after an account of a meeting of the Ladies' Aid appeared with this concluding paragraph: "Following the musical program, Mrs. J. T. Miller read an article on 'Personal Devils.' Seventeen were present."

TELEPHONE COMPANY ISSUES NEW BOOKLET

An outstanding feature of modern home building is seen in the attention paid by architects, owners and builders to providing facilities for telephone, gas, water and electrical services, in order that beautiful interiors and exteriors may not be disturbed in making additional installations, at later dates. For the convenience of those interested in new homes, or in remodeling old homes, the telephone company has issued a booklet entitled "In Your Building Plans, Remember Telephone Service," which contains valuable information regarding telephone facility advance provisions. Copies of this booklet can be procured from the company's local business office.

Pipes for water and gas, and outlets for electric light and power service are now essential features of home construction. Ranking with these in importance are conduits and accessory equipment for the accommodation of telephone wires, which make it unnecessary to cut holes in walls and partitions, when additional telephone installations are made, after the home is completed.

The telephone company's new booklet contains the latest information on the telephone phase of construction, and is of great interest to home owners or prospective owners. The results of a wide experience and research by telephone engineers is contained in the publication.

GRABBING

Brother Bacon told the other pigs that he had discovered something and, of course, they all thought that he had found some food.

They all began to ask for it in their best manners and Grandfather Porky Pig said:

"My dear grandson is going to give it to me. Yes, he is going to stand up and say:

"Dear grandfather, it gives me great pleasure to say these few words before I present to you this token of my affection and of my esteem. In which I am sure all those present join me."

"You have been a fine citizen of the pen. You have never failed to try, at least, to get the best for yourself."

"You have never failed to uphold the family name of pig. You have never failed to appreciate that you were at the head of the pen and while those under you should receive what they can get themselves, you were the one to have the best."

"So, dear grandfather, it gives me great pleasure to present to you this piece of food."

"The words of the speech are all right," said Miss Ham, "but instead of addressing them to you, they should be addressed to me.

"Ladies before gentlemen is a wise old saying and the words should be addressed to me."

"I haven't discovered any food. When I said I had discovered something I didn't mean I had discovered food."

All the pigs grunted very mournful little grunts.

"It's sad to hear such news when our hopes were so high," said Pinky Pig.

And all the others agreed. "I have discovered that people were being thrifty and eating more parts of the vegetables than they did before, and it was a very sad discovery."

All the pigs gave groaning grunts. "We'll just have to grab more than ever," said Porky. "Look about us and grab!"

"Let that be the watchword of the pen."

But they all looked sadly at Brother Bacon for he had disappointed them when they had had such high hopes.

William Tell

Here is the story of William Tell shooting the apple from his son's head one January day many years ago.

In the fourteenth century, Austria tried to bring the Swiss under her cruel rule. One day an Austrian governor named Gessler placed his hat on a pole in the market place and ordered that all the people bow before it.

Most of the Swiss obeyed this order, but as William Tell came through the market place he kept his head high. He was seized and condemned to die, but Gessler, hearing that Tell was a good archer, told him that instead of dying he must shoot an apple from his son's head with his bow and arrow.

Tell did this successfully and it so maddened Gessler that he ordered Tell's imprisonment.

While Gessler and his soldiers were taking Tell across the lake to prison a fierce storm arose. Tell was unbound and told to guide the ship to safety. Instead, he ran it on a rocky shore and escaped when the boat foundered.

No one was killed in the wreck, but the next day, when Gessler was in the woods, hunting for Tell, he was killed by an arrow from the trees.

The bravery and daring of William Tell aroused the Swiss to start their long and desperate battle for freedom.

Horses Afraid of Pants

Little Jimmie and Bill, the grocer's delivery man, were great friends, and on the momentous day, when Jimmie emerged from pants suits to real cloth knickerbockers, he waited eagerly in front of the house for Bill's coming.

But the delivery man, when he came, busied himself about the wagon without seeming to see anything unusual in his small chum's appearance. Jimmie stood around hopefully in various conspicuous positions until he could stand it no longer.

"Bill," he burst out at last, "is your horse afraid of pants?"

FARRELL BOOSTS OLD ATHLETES

Old-Timers' Work Praised by Michigan Coach.

Would the athletes of 15 and 20 years ago hold their own against the athletes of today under present day conditions? Certainly they would, in the opinion of Steve Farrell, varsity of Michigan, who has been training all sorts of athletes for more than 25 years.

Steve believes that the modern athlete has things too easy. Walking any distance is unthought of by the average star today, while years ago, riding in street cars, cabs and busses was taboo with any aspiring college athlete. Coach Farrell admits, of course, that the increased dislike for using one's leg to travel between two given points is only the result of the attitude of college students as a body.

Training room attention, says the coach, was a thing unknown in years gone by. Shin splints, sore muscles and tendons and other ailments were just as common in those days, but were ignored, just because there was nothing one could do about it. Today, for the average athlete, the care of expert trainers and rubbers is considered as essential as good coaching.

If the average track man today, for instance, says Steve, were to be told how the track men used to train years ago, he would laugh. The "hard workout" which the present day track man fears would be considered only a preliminary warming up in those days. Any man who stayed out for the sport then did so because he liked it.

The aversion of the modern youth for stiff work is shown by the increasing proportion of candidates who select the shorter running distance events, and shun the mile and two-mile runs. The latter require long workouts daily, and unless the candidate is a glutton for punishment, he drops from the squad or decides he'd make a better short-distance man.

Steve does not go so far as to say that the athlete of yesterday was any more plucky than the present athlete. He merely infers that their bodies were sturdier, because of more intensive training, and they were more valuable to any team as all-around athletes than the modern stars as specialists in one or two events.

To sum up, the coach feels that given the present advantages of scientific coaching and training, as well as improved tracks and other facilities, the athlete of the past would have little difficulty in outstripping, outjumping or outdistancing the average "star" of today.

Breaks World's Mark

The photograph shows Walter Lauffer, the Lake Shore Athletic club's new swimmer, who shattered four seconds from the world's 150-yard backstroke record as he made his debut at the Central A. A. U. women's meet in the Lake Shore pool in Chicago. His time was 1 minute 40 4-5 seconds.

Errors as Essential to Baseball as Base Hits

John Joseph McGraw once said that errors are as essential to baseball as base hits and that if ever the error is removed from the game then baseball will collapse.

McGraw can say the same about football. Most of the thrills in football are the result of errors, mechanical or mental.

There would be nothing more monotonous in sport than a football game between two teams whose play was mechanically perfect. It would leave the spectators bored stiff.

Illinois and Michigan played a game at Ann Arbor last year. It was about as near mechanically correct as games are played in football, but it made no hit with the crowd. The experts were highly enthused, but the experts were outnumbered 500 to 1 by men and women who were completely bored.

San Francisco Player Cost $38; Brings $5,000

Even in these days of high-priced baseball players, with figures running from $5,000 to $15,000 in the minor leagues, the case of Alfred McCurdy stands out in bold relief.

The tall first baseman cost the Portland club $38.71—train fare and meals from San Francisco to the Oregon city. He was picked up on the "sand lots," played with the Pacific Coast league team in 1926 and 1927 and was sent to Des Moines of the Western league this year in a $5,000 cash and player deal.

DAINTY GOOD THINGS

A salad which is especially attractive and at the same time very good to eat is prepared as follows:

Take a large, firm, white canned pear, drain it from its juice and lay on a lettuce leaf. Fill the center with thick mayonnaise to which has been added a large prune stewed until soft and stuffed with cream cheese.

Grapefruit Salad.—Arrange sections of grapefruit freed from all membrane on a salad plate in the form of half a sphere. Around this put a fringe of lettuce for a border and over the lettuce close to the grapefruit place curled celery to form a wreath. Pour over the salad the following:

Glace Fruit Dressing.—Take one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of paprika, two table-spoonfuls of lemon juice, four table-spoonfuls of olive oil, one table-spoonful each of glacé cherries, plums and apricots cut into pieces. Make a French dressing of the first four ingredients and add the fruit.

Liver is a valuable food for those who are in good health and is invaluable for those who are anemic. The calf's liver is much liked because it is tender and well flavored, but beef liver may be used equally well if perfectly fresh.

Liver Hash.—Parboil one pound of liver so that it will be firm enough to chop. Fry one-fourth pound of bacon and chop with the liver. Cook two minced green peppers in the bacon fat for five minutes, then add the liver, bacon and two cupfuls of boiled chopped potatoes. Season to taste and bake in the frying pan. Onions may be added if desired.

Liver Cocktail.—Serve cooked, chopped liver with the following sauce: One-half cupful of tomato catsup, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce, one-half teaspoonful of finely minced chives with salt and pepper to taste. Serve cold with saltines.

Liver Baked in Milk.—Take one calf or beef liver, cut it into serving-sized pieces, sprinkle with salt and pepper and arrange in a baking dish which has been well greased with bacon fat. Cover with scalded milk and bake in a moderate oven for forty minutes or until the liver is tender. Serve with broiled bacon.

Something Different.

One of the chief charms of travel in foreign places or in different sections in our own country is the food that is served.

We may not like all of it, but it is a pleasure to try combinations of foods peculiar to a locality. The manner of serving food is no less a pleasure, for in the sections where these foreign foods are served they come to us in unique ways:

Soup served in large tureens with a large silver ladle—one may be served or serve one's self to as much as the dish will hold. Bread cut into three-inch slices fresh from the oven with a buttery tasting crust when spread with butter that makes one say, "I can make a meal on this bread, butter and soup."

Shrimps so white, so tender and so fresh that the simplest of salad dressing is all that is needed to bring out their deliciousness, reposing on a nest of lettuce. The dressing is simply a bit of vinegar and oil with a dash of Worcestershire sauce.

Oysters brought in fresh from the ocean every morning and eaten by the dozen as an appetizer before breakfast with a dash of chili sauce, catsup or horseradish.

Pompano, the tenderest white fish, baked in paper cases in a rich white sauce is one of Antoine's much sought after dishes. Coffee, so black, so strong, so good, served at the Patio Royal, in small tall glasses, clear. At Madame Begue's the wonderful liver and bacon which she serves for breakfast and her chicken served on Sunday night with the home-made French bread, and the gravy of the chicken just a thin rich liquor flavored with mushrooms, all these and many more most attractive dishes such as gumbo, creole dishes of various kinds may be found in the fascinating city of New Orleans.

The custom of serving soup at the table has gone out in most of our modern homes; but after having it served so hot and appetizing, we feel that we may go back to the old method. A dish of soup that is lukewarm is a dish entirely ruined.

Consomme Julienne.—Cut into shoe-string widths one white turnip, one carrot, a stalk of celery and six string beans and cook until the vegetables are just tender in a very little salted water. Add to a quart of consomme. At the same time add one-fourth cupful of cooked green peas and tiny lima beans.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Rejection of all bids by California oil companies for gasoline and oil supplies to State-owned automobiles operating without a fixed base was announced a few days ago by W. G. McMillin, State Purchasing Agent. McMillin's action was taken because the bids were all too high and were nearly identical. The State will readvertise. The business aggregates $80,000 annually.

A $150,845.60 contract for highway work in Imperial county was awarded to the Jahn & Bressi Construction Company of Los Angeles county a few days ago by Bert B. Meek, State director of public works.

California inspected 8,148 ships and 1,497 fishing boats during 1927 in port inspection work enforcing quarantines against introduction of dangerous agricultural pests. The work included inspection of 6,153,431 parcels of plants and plant products, according to George H. Hecke, State director of agriculture, and 2,600 insect pests, including many not now existing in California, were intercepted.

Reflecting the rapidity with which California's water resources are being harnessed for the development of agriculture, industry and domestic life, Harold Conkling, chief of the division of water rights, department of public works, last week reported that $90,665,861 in water projects were authorized by his department in 1927. In all there were 248 development permits issued.

The six Folsom Thanksgiving Day rioters a few days ago pleaded not guilty to the second charge of murder filed against them in connection with their uprising and will go on trial before Superior Judge J. R. Hughes at Sacramento on March 26. The convict sextet is accused of the murder of George "Red" Baker, Folsom trusty shot down during the mutiny last November.

California's county budget system, provided for by the last Legislature, is probably the best local budgeting plan in America, according to Alexander R. Heron, State director of finance. Under the new budget law boards of supervisors are required to prepare a financial set-up showing all sources of income and proposed expenditures. The plan is similar to that followed by the State government.

The activities of the surveyor general's office between July 1, 1926, and February 2, 1928, netted the State $221,219.45 in school moneys and funds for its other functions, Surveyor General W. S. Kingsbury reported recently. The sale of public lands turned over to the State by the government in lieu of the two sections per township set aside for schools netted the State $128,886.87. These sales were at the rate of $6.50 per acre. In addition the sale of school lands at public auction netted $66,919.60, while rent and royalties on mineral lands netted $25,312.98.

The largest commercial ship built on the Pacific Coast since 1922 was launched last week at the Potrero plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation at San Francisco. The vessel, the Waialeale, was built for the Interisland Steam Navigation Company of Honolulu at a cost of $1,500,000 for the passenger service between the various islands of the Hawaiian group. The Waialeale is 310 feet long with a beam of forty-eight feet and is equipped with twin screw turbine engines of 2,000 horsepower each.

Not less than 2,200,000 names on the great register of California for the presidential primaries this Spring is the expectation of Charles Hagerty, State election statistician in the office of Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan. If Hagerty's predictions are verified, the record will exceed any other registration total by approximately 300,000, or 16 per cent. And with such colorful candidates as Al Smith and Senator Reed and Herbert Hoover making the race, Hagerty is confident that the vote also may establish a new high mark in State politics.

The United States government has flatly refused to participate in the cost of the Klamath river bridge, erected with "faulty construction" during the administration of former Governor Friend W. Richardson, and has demanded that California return $120,000 in federal aid funds advanced on the project. The division of highways, State department of public works, so announced a few days, declaring that the present administration has fallen heir to difficulties which were described as involving the structure since the day of its dedication by former Governor Richardson in 1926. The announcement said notice of the federal government's position has been formally served on California highway authorities.

Plans for establishment of another airplane passenger service through Bakersfield with twelve passenger cabin planes operating within the next week between San Francisco and San Diego, were announced at Bakersfield last week by Howard Nicholas, chairman of the Kern County Airport Commission. The Maddux Corporation is operating a regular passenger service between Los Angeles and San Diego at the present time, and before March 15th will open the line between the southern cities and San Francisco, with two daily stops at Bakersfield airport.

Drink Water If Back or Kidneys Hurt

Begin Taking Salts if You Feel
Backache or Have Bladder Weakness

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders. By all means, drink lots of good water every day.

Got Away From Pistol

It turned out that a loaded pistol given to Frank Williams, a Philadelphia garage employee, to protect his employer's property delayed the protection. Williams placed the pistol on a desk in the office with its muzzle pointing at the door. Then he began his duty of washing cars. There came a blast from the office. A stove had exploded. Running to the scene, Williams was about to enter when his eye fell upon the pistol pointed directly at him, and with flames surrounding it. He ran the other way and called the fire department.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

BANK OF ITALY shareholders have assembled the world's largest aggregation of banking capital—200 million dollars. all added evidence that organized crime is in relentless warfare against organized society.

"The first purpose of civilized government is to protect the people in life, person and property against evildoers. Gag as it may, Americans must swallow the sickening fact that, measured by other enlightened nations, this country is a flagrant failure in dealing with crime.

"The Bidwell brothers, two Americans who laid a plot to rob the Bank of England by tunneling under a street, served a long term in a British prison. They returned to this country eloquent over the grueling punishment they had suffered. 'We took a chance,' said one of the Bidwells, 'because we are Americans and didn't know any better. No man who has ever served a term in an English prison is likely to commit another crime in England.' That was twenty-five years ago, but the American people have not yet learned the lesson. We are still dithering and coddling and temporizing, and sometimes even lionizing the criminals."

We spend too much time in this country considering and legislating on ways to restrict law-abiding citizens and too little time on catching and punishing criminals.

STANFORD OFFICIALS ARE BACKING HOOVER

There is no question as to where Stanford, the alma mater of Herbert C. Hoover, stands in the matter of his candidacy for the Presidency—at least unofficially. Both Dr. David Starr Jordan, chancellor emeritus and Dr. Ray Lyman Wilber, president of Stanford, have gone on record in the matter.

Dr. Jordan declares that Hoover is the man "best fitted for the Presidency of the United States." Hoover graduated in the class of 1895, is a member of the board of trustees and his home is on the campus.

Dr. Jordan's statement is as follows: "Herbert Hoover is, to my mind, the man best fitted for the Presidency of the United States. No better organizer of business matters can be found. No one could be more unselfish or more devoted to the welfare of the people he serves. He knows politics as thoroughly as any man living, so well, indeed, that nothing could induce him to enter into political antics or intrigues.

"Hoover delights in the most difficult jobs. He is without illusions, and cultivates no shams. Politicians of both parties are distrustful of him for reasons that endear him to the wisest of people at large. He is slow to anger and can be silent in many languages. He is still young, in perfect health, and no part of the world is strange to him. He has sustained nerve. His appointments will be men he can trust."

Hoover sentiment is daily growing throughout the country, according to Dr. Wilber, recently returned from the Pan-American conference.

"All circumstances now seem to be working favorably for Hoover's nomination," declared Dr. Wilber. "If this wide-spread public interest can make itself felt on the convention there will be no question but that Hoover will be standard-bearer of the Republican party."

WERE I THE WIND

By Wesley Strong.

Were I the wind of the western sphere,
How would I travel the stretching strand
Where runs the endless miles away from here,
And into the realms of a different land.

And the city streets I'd see so gay,
Where the price of Glory they say runs high;
Where Fame and Fortune and Death all play,
To make our souls all wrinkled and wry.

Now the slumbering peaceful country town,
Where hymns in the dead of winter are sung;
The echo of the church bells sadly sound,
When drapes on the doors of the dead are hung.

Now the meadows where remain the flowers,
Thriving untouched in the clime of the plain,
And droop all laden the bending bowers,
The birds and wood sects happy and fain.

Oh, rushing Wind! Could I but remain.
Tell all who hath not by Nature taught—
Whisper, Oh Wind, Life is ugly pain,
And from the lowly great deeds are wrought.

NATIONAL FORESTS TO AID ROAD AND SCHOOL FUNDS

Thirty-nine counties in California will receive a share of $291,437 as their part of the annual receipts from national forest revenues for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, according to report of S. B. Snow, chief of the California district, U. S. Forest Service. An additional 10 per cent, or $115,138, of last year's forest receipts will also be spent by the Forest Service during the present fiscal year in the construction of roads and trails within these counties.

Under the so-called 25 per cent fund law, one-fourth of all receipts from the national forests received from the sale of timber, grazing fees and other forest resources are returned to the state to be pro-rated among the counties on the basis of the amount of Federal forest land within the counties. The leading counties that will benefit from this return are: Plumas, $51,932; Fresno, $37,848; Tuolumne, $35,832; Lassen, $28,119; Shasta, $16,241; and Madera, $12,871.

But this 25 per cent refund from receipts and the 10 per cent road and trail fund are not the only monetary benefits that the state derives from the national forests, Mr. Snow points out. During the past fiscal year, under appropriations by Congress, more than a million dollars was spent by the Forest Service in California, in co-operation with the state and counties, on road projects within and adjacent to the national forests—making a grand total of nearly one and one-half million dollars received by the state, in lieu of taxes, by reason of the existence of Federal forests in the state.

The cunning displayed by most murderers who plead insanity leads one to suspect that there is method in their madness.

How True
Man is but a worm. He comes along, wriggles a little in the dust, and then some chicken gets him.

Piatt: "Make a sentence with paradise in it."
Kavanaugh: "I got a paradise that pay my rent."

"Daddy, why is that man running up and down the smoking car with his mouth open?"
"My son, that is a Scotchman getting a free smoke."

You can rent a house, but when you own it, it becomes a Home.

In Subject A
Distressed Professor: "Why don't you answer me?"
Frosh: "I did shake my head."
D. T.: "Well, did you expect me to hear it rattle way up here?"

The man who doesn't own his own home gets little credit for his opinion in his home town.

Where, Oh Where
Officer: "You were doing forty-five. I'll have to pinch you."
Martha: "Oh, if you must, please do it where it won't show!"

Power of Suggestion
Tom: "Why are your socks on wrong side out, Bob?"
Bob: "My feet were hot and I turned the hose on them."

Sure Dope
Sweetie: "What is the cure for seasickness?"
Salty: "Give it up."

Ring us up when you need Building Material.

Young Son: "What is an airplane, Dad?"
Father: "Mine, just after your mother has gone through them."
